HOW IT WORKS

Safe, clean and affordable housing is a basic human need. For women, the need for this basic necessity of life is even greater. The Transitional Housing Network for Women is an effort of ICNA Relief USA to address the issue of homelessness and poverty within the community.

ICNA Relief USA is committed to providing services that are sensitive to the religious and cultural needs of residents allowing them the opportunity to pursue educational and career goals in a stable, secure, nurturing environment. Our main goal is to help clients transition to independent living and long term self-sufficiency.

Trained case managers and professional counselors work with residents in identifying areas of growth and link them to appropriate community resources such as public benefits, legal and immigration support, mental health services and healthcare. Residents are encouraged to take part in educational classes including: English language skills, job training and/or higher education.
